Spotlight on College Costs

In an effort to gather feedback about the Student Aid and Fiscal Responsibility Act (HR 3221), Rep. We [illegible] Vermont students, [illegible] and pare [illegible]
lly amended the legislation which passed the House

"For too many Vermonters, the tools to succeed in today's economy are simply out of reach. In order to expand the opportunity created by a college education, Congress must continue to increase financial aid to students. At the same time, institutions of higher learning must do their part to bring costs under control and ensure that ever-increasing college costs are not outpacing the ability of middle class families to afford them. Only through the combination of controlling college costs and increasing aid will we succeed in making higher education more affordable to Vermonters."
